BANK STATEMENT A CAUSED DECLINE

Prices Started Out Well in Wall Street Yesterday.

SOME HEAVY TRANSACTIONS

STOCKS HAVE GAINED DURING THE WEEK.

New York, Sept. 23 .- There were very heavy transactions today in a number of the most prominent active stocks on the list. This business looked like an active absorption of these issues. That the offerings to realize were quite strictly comensurate is sufficiently indicated by these transactions at the end of the short session. The majority of these showed losses. That a large distribution of holdings was effected is the impression created. The movement was irregular, but prices advanced with some aggressiveness before the appearance of the bank statement, on the supposition that it would make a favorable showing. The closing tendency, however, was easy. The bank statement showed a decline in reserves about as large as the extreme pre-liminary estimate. The contraction in the loan item afforded the necessary relief from the deposit liability and afforded a nominal increase in the small surplus reserve.

Large arrivals of gold in London were all secured in the open market for export and this had a depressing effect on securities in London. It could not be learned that any part of this gold was taken for New York. The movement is looked upon as likely to increase the probability of an advance next week in the Bank of England discount rate. The heavy demands to be met by the money next week meantime are the ground for some apprehension, Total sals of bonds, par value $3,630,600.

Stocks have made headway this week next week meantime are the ground for some apprehension. Total sals of bonds, par value 33,630,000.

Stocks have made headway this week against the constraining influence of the doubtful money outlook and some of the immediate developments in the money situation have been towards relief of the drain upon banking reserves. It is very noticeable that the principal movements have been in stocks in which the existence of speculative pools is notorious or in stocks in which are readily susceptible to manipulation by reason of small floating supply in the market. Much use has been made also of vague and unconfirmed rumors of deals and of old reports revived after having already exerted a marked influence on prices of the stocks affected some tim eago. This has given the impression that the participation in the dealings was that of professional operators to a large extent. Commission houses in fact continue to complain of light business and that the general public persists in holding aloof.

The money situation remains the only drawback in the general outlook. Advices

The money situation remains the only drawback in the general outlook. Advices from all other sources are of extraordinary prosperity, which scarcely call for specification. Railroad traffle is of unparalleled volume. "A buying rush" is the term used to describe the iron situation. Railroads are placing enormous orders for various kinds of equipment. The curse of the week has resulted in nothing unfavorable to the progress of the crops. The firm undertone of the stock market is abundantly explained by this situation.

The cash reserve is now at the lowest point of the year. In the wheat market fluctuations in prices of all deliveries were confined in a range of 3c. The volume of trading was extremely small. Weather in the northwest is again favorable for the movement of the new crop. Evidence of this was found in the liberal arrivals at Minneapolis and Duluth. Receipts today at these two points totaled 1.948 cars, against 645 cars the corresponding day a year ago. Higher prices at Liverpool, however, acted as an offset to the heavy receipts in the northwest. A leading bull was a time the northwest. A leading bull was a moderate buyer of wheat here throughout the entire session. The support from this source tended to check selling which would apparently have otherwise been a natural consequence of the first wheat at all grain centers helped to minimize the importance of the libroral receipts as a bearish factor.
